Regarding the JKDP on the first page, I think that was a pun meant by the author.
JKDP. Meaning "Jiyun Kore wa Dai Pinch" (Jiyun, this is big trouble!) could also stand for JK, Joshi Kousei (high school girl) and DP, Pen... Double Penetration.
I had to research this since I didn't know what DP was... Not sure if that was intentional on the author's part or not.

That boy came and made me change my mind.

It made me remember the time when you were still like that...
What did you do that for, Jun...?
Then that boy said that he didn't have any money, so I said he could just carry me here in exchange.
Well, I could have just called a taxi and even attended the ceremony in the morning, but...
Starting next month, you're gonna be living on your own, right?

When I thought that you won't sneak away daifuku anymore, I got sad and, for some reason, acted tough in front of you.
